Dear Patriot,

President Trump said it: In America, the impossible is what we do best.

We are going to be tested like never before.

But, Americans can do impossible things!

Keep praying.

We are looking forward to a true and fierce warrior, Stephen Miller taking over as President Trump's Chief of Staff.

We have followed Stephen since his days at Duke University. He has never waived.

Housekeeping: We apologize that the link to the Promethean Action expired by t time some of you clicked on it.

Today, we bring you a smorgasbord of stories…

- like an infected wound, the fraud is oozing out.
- shake up in the White House.
- stop being so good at your job, white people!
- friends don't let friends go to college.
- all the people not committing fraud, appear to be working.
- X posts you may have missed.

1- As usual, there is a mountain of evidence seeping out about major fraud in the election. We are watching it all.

Massive Corruption in Texas – Nearly 3 Million Voters Added to Voter Rolls Without Proof of Citizenship

QUOTE: The results in Texas make no sense and now we know why. Every county shifted blue – this is not statistically possible. Not with the Democrat candidates policies in Texas.

Kyle Becker lists several impossibilities in this year's Texas results.

Now we know what caused this. The state added nearly 3 million voters to its vot rolls before this election without proof of citizenship.

On page 193 of the PDF (printed as page 174 in the appendix table for Chapter 3 Texas reported:

• Total registration transactions received: 5,133,464

• New Valid Registrations: 2,900,357 (56.5%)

• Updates to existing registrations: 2,165,514 (42.2%)

"New Valid Registrations" means registration applications that were accepted and resulted in a new record being added to the voter list for someone not previousl registered in that jurisdiction. These cover the period from the close of registratio for the 2022 general election to the close of registration for the 2024 general election. Nationally, new valid registrations made up about 25.3% of all transactio Texas's share was much higher.

Texas law requires U.S. citizenship to register and vote. The state voter registratic application requires an affirmative statement that the applicant is a U.S. citizen, v criminal penalties (state and federal) for false information.

Documentary proof of citizenship (birth certificate, passport, naturalization pape etc.) is not required at the time of registration for ordinary applications. This was rule during the 2022–2024 window covered by the EAVS data. The tweet's core claim on this point is accurate.

> This is how you steal a state like Texas. The DOJ and Homeland Security should h > been there yesterday investigating this.

2- We honestly do not know yet who to trust on this story. We will let it play out a l more.

We do know that many people who came into the Administration behind the MAH/
Movement have been deeply frustrated and disappointed with the lack of progress.
That frustration is not with Kennedy but with the Swamp.

This story will give you the background on what may have been questionable actior by Susie Wiles.

> QUOTE: Calley Means Accuses Susie Wiles and James Blair of Harassment a Day
> After His Bombshell Interview on the Joe Rogan Experience Podcast
> QUOTE: On Saturday, Calley Means, a former Health and Human Services senior > advisor, took to X to defend himself against what he called 'harassment' by form
> White House Chief of Staff, Susie Wiles, and her deputy, James Blair.
> "This is a formal request for Susie Wiles and James Blair to stop harassing me wit > texts and calls," Means wrote. "If there is a factual inaccuracy in what I said, send to me in writing and I will vigorously correct and apologize for any misstatement will note that everything I said is substantiated by other senior officials."

He continued, "If you want to file a lawsuit and get into discovery of whether it's provably true that Ballard and Continental had an undue influence on the White House policy process, do it. I believe we are in an existential moment for the country, and Americans were owed an honest accounting of the past two years s we identify the problems we need to move on from."

Also on Saturday, Rep. Anna Paulina Luna defended Blair, writing on X, "When everyone in DC (to include the then minority leader) was against me in my first campaign and in the primary on my second, JamesBlair helped me take on a pharma funded shill and beat one of their lobbyists who ran against me. She was handpicked at the time BY THE PARTY. He defended me when members of the conference were trying to get me thrown off my committees because I proposed the amendment to remove the pesticide liability shield out of the FARM BILL . . . The idea that he works against or isn't MAHA is just not true."

Luna, one of the most vocal and successful MAHA legislators in Congress, who w endorsed by MAHA Action, found common ground with Means in a subsequent exchange on X.

Means' accusation against Wiles and Blair followed his explosive appearance on podcast, The Joe Rogan Experience. On Friday, November 6, Means delivered a blistering, two-hour-plus account of his time at HHS, telling podcast host Rogan about a tight cabal of lobbyist-connected aides working with former Chief of Sta Wiles. He said this group, among the most powerful in the country, systematicall sabotaged Make America Healthy Again priorities while bowing to special-intere groups.On Sunday, Means went on CBS's Face the Nation with Margaret Brennar repeating key points he made on Rogan. Asked by Brennan whether his intentior by speaking out on Rogan was to get Wiles removed, he answered "yes."

> The Rogan interview dropped the same day President Trump announced he was replacing Wiles with longtime aide Stephen Miller, effective on Monday, Novemb 9, with Wiles shifting to the Trump political operation.
> Means, who resigned in late October after serving as a key architect of the MAH/ effort under Health and Human Services (HHS) Secretary Robert F. Kennedy Jr., described the early days of the Trump administration as "absolutely electric," witl staff convinced they would deliver on the health, food, and anti-corruption promises that helped elect the president for a second term.
> But that energy, Means said, collided with what he called the most centralized White House power structure in modern history. No significant policy proposals advanced without approval from Wiles's office, and cabinet secretaries spent meetings managing access to her and the small group that served her.

3- Shocking discrimination is caught. Lockheed will pay, but will it stop?

Lockheed Martin to pay $29.5 million for discriminating against whites

> QUOTE: Well, after the political beating Republicans took in the midterms, here's little news that might actually put a smile on some faces.Lockheed Martin, one o the biggest defense contractors in America, is about to shell out almost $30 milli to settle federal allegations that its DEI program discriminated against white employees. And the allegations involved extra pay, promotions, and other opportunities at work that white people were excluded from because of the colo their skin.

That's called racism.

But apparently, much of corporate America thought they'd discovered an except as long as the racism was dressed up in all white.

The Trump administration's Justice Department and Equal Employment Opportu Commission went after the defense contractor, and now they're learning a valual 30-million-dollar lesson about anti-white hate.

Lockheed Martin will make two separate payments: one to the federal governme over violations of contracting requirements, and another for white employees wh were discriminated against.

They will pay $22 million to the U.S. government to resolve claims that it failed to comply with anti-discrimination requirements in its federal contracts. In addition, Lockheed Martin will pay $7.5 million to more than 1,000 affected employees as part of a settlement with the EEOC, which had been investigating the company fo violating Title VII of the 1964 Civil Rights Act, which prohibits employment discrimination based on race. The suit covers more than a thousand white employees who were discriminated against.

But it's how these racist programs worked that has raised eyebrows.

Lockheed introduced a system back in 2021 that was supposed to "reward" its to performers with extra pay and big opportunities for advancement, and the managers made their picks. Next, we reviewed the reviews to see if those selectio yielded the racial and gender breakdown the company wanted to see.

> And that's where everything went sideways. Apparently, too many white employe were putting in an honest day's work, excelling at their jobs, and earning those bonuses on merit. And somehow, that became a problem for Lockheed Martin.
> Imagine doing your job so well that you earn a nomination for an extra raise, onl to have somebody higher up decide you're just a bit too white.
> Lockheed Martin pressured managers to remove white employees from merit-based bonus lists to make room for minority employees. But the Civil Rights Act doesn't give companies leeway to discriminate against white people because they're doing too good of a job. That's still racial discrimination, no matter how much DEI language you dunk it in.

4- Nothing makes us happier than to see young Americans ditching the propagand mills for a life of actually producing and not just working to pay off enormous debt.

Gen Z Trades the Lecture Hall for the Toolbox

> QUOTE: By middle school, Tyler Doege had already ruled out college.
> "I knew I liked to work with my hands," Doege, 22, of Lunenburg, Massachusetts, told The Epoch Times. He enrolled in a vocational high school, chose plumbing, a went straight to work after graduation.

Four years later, he is a licensed journeyman plumber earning between $80,000 a $100,000 a year, with no student debt.

Doege is part of a growing number of Gen Z Americans who are skipping the traditional four-year degree in favor of trade school, apprenticeships, and short-term training.

Public confidence in college has fallen sharply. Just 31 percent of U.S. adults now say a college education is "very important," a record low, according to a Gallup p released Oct. 1. That figure stood at 70 percent in 2013.

Young people such as Doege are drawing their own conclusions.

In an online poll of 1,140 adults ages 18 to 29, more respondents picked trade school or an apprenticeship (34 percent) than a four-year degree (23 percent) as path most likely to bring financial stability by age 30.

Ryan Jenkins, a Wall Street Journal bestselling author who studies generational dynamics and the future of work, told The Epoch Times that Gen Z has flipped th old career model.

"The model used to be learn and then earn, right? Go get your four-year degree and then put that to practice for the rest of your career, and that is just totally gone," said Jenkins, author of "The Generation Z Guide: The Complete Manual to Understand, Recruit, and Lead the Next Generation."

"Gen Z is shortening the distance between learning something and earning something," he said.

5- The “experts” did not come close to predicting this amazing jobs report which ca out a few days after the election.

Unleash Prosperity

America Is Working

> QUOTE: We’ve made the point that this election was NOT about the economy, stupid. And Friday’s jobs report confirms it. If only this blockbuster October read had come out a week earlier. Bottom line: hiring, job openings, blue collar jobs, previous month jobs revisions, labor force participation are way up.
>
> Nonfarm payrolls rose 165k in October while previous two months were revised a total of 84k, for a total increase of 249k.
>
> Employment based on household survey soared 463k in October, now up a whopping 1.4 million since July.
> Almost all jobs were private sector, which added 159k, government just 6k.
