TRUMP V. BIDEN: Latest '24 Poll is a DOOZY

For a while there, it really did appear as though a 2024 rematch between incumbent President Joe Biden and former Commander in Chief Donald Trump would be rather close...but not anymore.

Biden had been on an undeniable upswing as of late, with a number of polls showing his approval rating going from abysmal to merely dismal, and his team has been working on the timing and the message of his reelection campaign announcement.

But then he got caught smuggling classified government documents to a number of his personal and professional properties, in a scandal that makes Donald Trump's Mar-a-Lago storage of federal files look mundane in comparison.

The new has drastically shifted public opinion of Biden, and put Trump back in the 2024 driver's seat.

Trump at 46 percent leads Biden's 41 percent in the survey, with 13 percent who said they were unsure.

Trump also leads Vice President Kamala Harris by even more, with Trump at 48 percent, Harris at 40 percent, and 12 percent undecided.

And, perhaps just as important is how Trump fares against his potential GOP usurpers.

It is also worth noting that Trump is outperforming Florida Gov. Ron DeSantis in both hypothetical contests, against either Biden or Harris. While DeSantis still also leads both, he leads by less in each instance. Against Biden, DeSantis leads by just three percent—with 42 percent to Biden's 39 percent and 18 percent undecided—and against Harris, DeSantis also only leads by three percent, 43 percent to 40 percent with 17 percent undecided.

In the GOP primary, Trump has a 20-percent lead over DeSantis as well, at 48 percent to DeSantis at 28 percent. No other candidate gets double digits in this survey, with former Vice President Mike Pence coming in at seven
