CDC Info Drops... This is HORRIFIC

There is a new report buzzing around that should have everyone in this country that took the vaccine absolutely livid.

During the early stages of the vaccine, data was being gathered via an app by volunteers to give feedback on possible side effects of the vaccine.

According to the report, many of the “check-the-box” symptoms were common issues that had no long-term effects.

The more serious issues were left to be filled into the text area of the questionnaire, an area that is notoriously underused in surveys like this.

They Knew...

The CDC knew there were some very serious and dangerous side effects, yet it chose to hide them from the American people.

The Informed Consent Action Network (ICAN) requested this information from the CDC and it took 18 months for them to get a few excel files that would literally take seconds to pull.

The tweet below explains some of the information mentioned above...

Siri contends that omitting that information is “one of the best and most compelling pieces of evidence supporting premeditated [wrongful] conduct.”

He continued, “The CDC, in dozens of publications, relied on the data from v-safe to argue and support its recommendations regarding Covid-19 vaccination that upended the lives of tens of millions of Americans who refused to comply.”

Just the News has a very detailed report on this and you are going to want to read it when you get the chance to really sit down and digest this information.

This will be a significant blemish on the early days of Joe Biden’s presidency, as if he needs more.
