Biden WHISPERER REVEALED... They are CALLING THE SHOTS

We may have finally figured out who one of the major players calling the shots in this administration is.

It is actually an organization, and they are very far left, but this administration is saturated with them.

Ladies and gentlemen, I give you the Center for American Progress.

Calling the Shots

If I told you that a full 15 percent of Joe Biden's staff came from one far-left organization, would you consider that a threat?

If you do, you better start worrying.

As it turns out, there are an estimated 70 people from CAP working in this administration.

I am not talking about low-level players, either.

This is an uber-progressive group that is openly looking to change the country.

Just who are these people?

Well, it starts with one of the group's founders, John Podesta, who was just added to Joe Biden's team and handed $370 billion of our taxpayer funds to spend on climate change.

Neera Tanden, who failed to get through a Senate hearing was later added to Joe Biden's staff as an adviser.

She is the former president of CAP.

Fox News reports that White House Chief of Staff Ron Klain, top White House economic adviser Brian Deese, senior White House economic adviser Gene Sperling, Veteran Affairs Secretary Denis McDonough, and Department of Defense Chief of Staff Kelly Magsamen have all worked for CAP.

Anita Dunn, who has been in and out of Biden's administration, has also done consulting work for CAP.

Protect the Public's Trust President Michael Chamberlain stated, "As Protect the Public's Trust has discovered from tracking ethics waivers granted to political appointees, the revolving door connecting lobbying firms and activist organizations with powerful posts in federal agencies in the Biden Administration is spinning furiously.

"This has happened to such an extent that the organizations themselves are commenting, although facetiously, about losing all their good people.

"Considering a number of incidents PPT has uncovered in which appointees have appeared to cross the line between their advocacy and their public service, it's almost enough to make the public wonder who is really calling the shots.”

If you were not worried before, you should be now.
